MARTIAL LAW IN JOHNSTOWN

Rebel Troops Enter Bilbao After 3-Month Siege

'Invincible' Basque City Surrounded; All Roads Closed

Last Avenues of Escape, Toward Santander, Are Cut Off

GERMANY ANGERED Reports Attack on Cruiser—England May Recognize Rebels

By the Associated Press
Insurgent vanguards were ordered into Bilbao Saturday.

Before the patrols moved toward the center of the besieged city the insurgent commanders reported it had been completely encircled. They said the two roads westward toward Santander, the last avenues of escape, were closed.

Thus, apparently, the three-months siege against the Basque citadel, invincible against attack for centuries, approached its end.

Official reports in Berlin of two submarine attacks against the German cruiser Leipzig, on patrol duty off the coast of Algeria, created a new international situation.

May Recognize Franco

LONDON, Eng.—(P)—There were indications Friday night that Great Britain would grant Spanish Insurgent Generalissimo Franco the rights of a belligerent governor if he captured Bilbao.

The Foreign Office received Franco's request Friday that Britain accord his government the rights and obligations of an independent state as far as hostilities are concerned. There was no official comment but reliable informants said that favorable action depended upon Franco's success in the Bilbao campaign.

Franco, under belligerent status, could establish a legal blockade of Spanish government ports—if his navy is sufficiently strong. He would have the advantages of international law to support military activities. Hitherto insurgent ships have been considered to be operating as pirates if they sought to prevent free movement of shipping into Spanish government ports, or interfered with ships at sea. Belligerents have the right to halt and search merchantmen.

Protection Charged Withdrawn
The Basque government delegation charged in Paris that Great Britain had withdrawn protection from merchant ships which have been removing Bilbao refugees. Notice of Britain's decision came from a British warship commander who told the Spanish refugee ship Habana she no longer would be escorted, the delegation stated.

A British Admiralty spokesman said "We have no information about it."

The Basque charge came as a surprise in London. Some officials believed it was made as the result of reported capture of refugee ships sailing from Bilbao to Santander, Spanish government post west of the Basque capital. The Basques said insurgent planes machine-gunned roads and cut off other means of escape, with 70,000 noncombatants in urgent need of relief and only 30,000 removed.

Still No Trace of David Copeland, 28

Bodecaw Farmer Is Still Missing—Had $90 on His Person

There was no new developments here Saturday in the mysterious disappearance of David Copeland, 28, Bodecaw, southern Nevada county.

Sheriff Jim Bearden questioned three Hope men Friday after receiving information that they left Hope about two weeks ago with Copeland for Texarkana.

The sheriff said Copeland had about $90 when he left Hope. He disappeared in Texarkana and no trace of him has been found.

A report from Texarkana Saturday said that Copeland caught a taxicab in Texarkana the night of June 2, or thereabouts, and was taken to one of the bus terminals, according to information obtained by an Arkansas State police officer, who investigated the case.

It was not learned, however, where Copeland caught the taxicab nor was it learned whether he left that city on a bus. Inquiries at the Bowie county sheriff's office and at the Texarkana, Texas, police department failed to add light to the case.

Russian Plane Is Short of Its Goal

Nonstop Flight From Moscow to San Francisco Is Attempted

WASHINGTON —(P)—The Soviet embassy announced Friday night that the transpolar flight of three Russian aviators was still some distance short of the North Pole at 9 p. m. (EST) on an attempted nonstop dash from Moscow to San Francisco.

The embassy received a report from the plane, relayed by the Army Signal Corps, giving its position at that hour at latitude 85 degrees; longitude 58 degrees. An embassy spokesman explained this meant east longitude, which would have placed the plane at a point about halfway between Franz Joseph Land and the Pole, a distance of approximately 350 miles south of the Pole.

Thomas C. Trimble Confirmed as New U. S. Court Judge

Senate Approves His Appointment to Succeed Late Martineau

TO TAKE OATH SOON

Lapse of 10 Days Expected Before Commission Is Issued

WASHINGTON —(P)—Thomas C. Trimble, Jr., newly-appointed federal judge for the Eastern Arkansas district, said Saturday he probably would be sworn in at Little Rock next Friday.

He said he came to Washington to meet Attorney General Cummings personally. He planned to leave Washington for Little Rock Sunday, taking his judgeship commission with him.

Appointment Confirmed
LITTLE ROCK.—The United States Senate Friday confirmed the appointment of Thomas C. Trimble of Lonoke as federal judge for the Eastern district of Arkansas.

Mr. Trimble was in Washington at the time. The nomination, sent by President Roosevelt to the Capitol Thursday, encountered no delay in the senate judiciary committee. It was reported out Friday and confirmed immediately by the senate. Senate employees had predicted that confirmation might require as much as 10 days.

Mrs. Trimble said at her home Friday night that she had received word from her husband during the day and expected him back either Friday night or Saturday morning. She said he had not informed her the exact time of his departure from Washington.

Commission Due
Quick action by the senate made it possible for the new judge to take office before the end of the month. He cannot take the official oath before he receives his commission, however, and it was said at the Department of Justice that issuance of such documents usually requires several days.

After receipt of the commission the appointee will set his own time and place for taking the oath. It was recalled that 10 days elapsed between confirmation of the late Judge John E. Martineau, Mr. Trimble's predecessor, and receipt of his commission in 1928.

Judge Martineau, then governor, was nominated by President Coolidge and confirmed by the senate all on the same day, March 2. He received his commission March 12 and took the oath of his new office in the governor's reception room at the capitol on March 14 a few minutes after he had submitted his resignation as governor to the secretary of state. The oath was administered by Supreme Court Justice E. L. McHaney.

Ragon to Preside
It was considered likely that even if Mr. Trimble should receive his commission in time to take the oath by June 28 Judge Heartill Ragon of Fort Smith would handle the three-day outboard of miscellaneous cases opening that day.

Judge Martineau opened his first term of court here April 3, 1928. Judge George T. McDermott of Topeka, Kan., had been designated to hold court at Helena the week of March 20 before Judge Martineau was appointed. After the appointment was made Judge Martineau requested that the Kansas judge carry out the original plan and that was done.

The other is a ship's crank shaft made by Krupp in 1856, with 70 years of service behind it.

Blum's Financial Plea Is Rejected

Life of French Cabinet Put at Stake Over Conflict

Huge Deficit for France
PARIS, France.—(P)—The life of Premier Leon Blum's cabinet virtually was put at stake Friday night in a deadlock conflict with the senate over the premier's demands for emergency powers over France's finances. The senate refused to grant Blum the powers to control finances by decree he asked until July 31. The premier refused to accept anything less.

Premier Blum and Abel Gardey, reporter of the Senate's Finance Committee, conferred, but both said they had been unable to find any grounds for compromise. This foreshadowed a battle in the senate Saturday, with fate of the People's Front cabinet in the balance.

Premier Blum thus was faced with the choice of allowing the senate to pass its own measure, or insisting on passage of his own bill and making it a question of confidence in the government. In case the senate passes its bill, the premier presumably would ask the chamber to readopt his measure and wage a decisive fight on its second trip to the upper house.

Such a course would enable him to stall for time and give Camille Chautemps, minister of state, an opportunity to attempt to whip radical senators into line.

Premier Blum and his finance minister have insisted that the government must have full power to take emergency action to meet an expected deficit of $1,750,000,000 in regular and extraordinary expenditures for 1937.

All Stray Dogs in City to Be Shot

Three Local Persons Recently Bitten, Hope Police Report

Police Chief John W. Ridgill issued a warning Saturday that all stray dogs in Hope would be shot in an effort to curb a mad-dog menace that is growing more alarming.

Ridgill said that more than 30 dogs had been shot to death in the past two months, several of them suspected of being affected with rabies.

He reported that three persons living in the western part of town were recently bitten by a mad dog, and are now taking treatment.

He also reported that livestock in the southern and eastern edges of Hope had been bitten by suspected mad dogs. He asked that pets be kept up, muzzled or vaccinated against rabies.

Persons vaccinating their pets are asked to file this information with the police department for identification purposes.

Sir James Barrie, Great Author, Dies

Creator of "Peter Pan" Succumbs in London at Age of 77

LONDON, Eng.—(P)—Sir James M. Barrie, 77, creator of the immortal "Peter Pan," died Saturday.

The British playwright and novelist, who gave to the world the piquant story of the little boy who wouldn't grow up, was taken to a London nursing home June 11, suffering from bronchial pneumonia. He had been ill a long time.

The papers had hardly reached the street before the effects of the article became apparent.

A Little Rock lawyer, whose name they can't recall, called up and offered his legal services free to help them "beat the rap." And when they persuaded a lawyer to exercise his talents without pay, you've done something.

Representatives of several charitable organizations called on the pair at the jail and gave assurances that they soon would have them out of there.

"We meant it when we said that we'd work at anything to get money to pay our fines but it seems to be unnecessary," chorused the pair Friday night. "A man who represents an organization that has taken an interest in us said that he would see that the fines were paid and would furnish us with railroad transportation back to Brooklyn."

"Friday afternoon, four other people came in to see us," continued Roberts. "All offered us work and promised to advance enough money to pay our fines. They were too late, but we both think that they were awfully nice. We were offered jobs as waitresses and had one offer of a secretarial job. We would have jumped at any of them yesterday."

"The girls were too happy over the kindness that had been shown them to harbor any resentment against their arrest."

They even said that they thought the anti-hitch-hiking law is a good thing but they believed that persons like themselves, who did not know of the law's existence, should be given a warning before they are arrested.

Among those who found interest in the girls' case was Representative I. N. Moore of Desha county, author of the law forbidding hitch-hiking, who was visiting Little Rock Friday. He commented that he sympathized as much as anyone with the young women who had run afoul of his law but still contended that it is a good law. He believed that it will reduce crimes of violence on the highways. He confessed that he used to pick up hitch-hikers himself, but said that he became convinced several weeks ago that the practice was too dangerous and has discontinued it.

Johnstown's Mayor Sends New Urgent Telegram to President

JOHNSTOWN, Pa.—(P)—Governor Earle of Pennsylvania declared martial law in strike-embattled Johnstown Saturday after Eugene Grace, president of Bethlehem Steel corporation, had refused to heed the governor's appeal to close the big Cambria steel works "to preserve peace and avoid bloodshed."

The governor's action coincided with a report that 40,000 miners would march on Johnstown Sunday to encourage the steel strikers in the 24-hour clash between John L. Lewis CIO and four independent steel companies over the refusal of the latter to sign labor contracts.

The rapidly-darkening situation in "the bitter battle of steel" was emphasized in a new telegraphic appeal to President Roosevelt by Mayor Shields of Johnstown.

Rescue Comes to Girl Hitch-Hikers

Arkansas Will Send Them Home to Brooklyn Aboard a Train

LITTLE ROCK.—Add to the long list of those who believe in the efficacy of newspaper advertising.

Rose Caracus and Roberta Kremer of Brooklyn, N. Y., and the Pulaski county girls, who hold the unwanted distinction of being the first to be arrested under Arkansas' new anti-hitch-hiking law, are on their way.

They're starting back for Brooklyn Saturday. And in style. On a train.

Their fines have been paid, and they're all square with the world. They offered as work and promised to advance enough money to pay out fines. They were too late, but we both think that they were awfully nice. We were offered jobs as waitresses and had one offer of a secretarial job. We would have jumped at any of them yesterday."

Mrs. Mary Delland was grief stricken at the death of her husband. Her sister Ann attended to the guests and made herself generally useful before the funeral. The doorman rang.
"I'll answer it, Mary," said Ann.
As she opened the door, a delivery boy presented a package from a florist.
"It was ordered by telegraph," the boy said.
Ann took the package and put the flowers away. Then she rejoined her sister.
"Some more flowers," she told Mary.
"I hardly know where to put them all, you have so many."
A few minutes later another ring of the bell called Ann to the door.
"Express package, ma'am," said the man. "Delivery by truck. Charges collect, $8.50."
Ann paid the bill and took the package.
"What was it, Ann?" asked Mrs. Delland.
"Oh, just an express package, dear. Nothing you need to bother about now. I'll take care of everything and later we can look things over. But just now I want you to get some rest."
It was not long before Ann was summoned to the door a third time. A boy stood there with a suit box.
"What is it?" asked Ann.
"A suit of clothes Mr. Delland ordered a few days ago," the boy replied. "There were some alterations. There's a balance of $22.50."
As Ann paid the bill and put the package away, she thought how useless the suit would be. She was some-

Why Political Reform Often Fails to Last

AST fall the city of New York adopted a new city charter. In the charter was a provision that city elections hereafter be held under the proportional representation system.

This system is about as complicated a method of electing public officials as could well be imagined, but its chief purpose is to hamstring machine politicians by giving every citizen the chance to vote for candidates in the order of preference. If the man the voter likes best loses, or if he wins by such a wide margin that many of his votes are not needed, ballots cast for him are counted for the citizen's second choice, and so on down the line.

Tammany Hall, which has fallen on lean years of late, vigorously opposed this feature of the new charter. It went to court to get it thrown out; and the other day it met final defeat when the state court of appeals upheld proportional representation and okayed the disputed charter.

X X X

NOW the surface conclusion to be drawn from all of that is that machine politics, as exemplified by Tammany, has met a crushing defeat and that political life in the metropolis will be cleaner, clearer and most wholesome hereafter.

But people who take this hopeful view of things might well remember what happened in Cleveland some 15 years ago. Cleveland then adopted a new charter, with proportional representation. Citizens breathed deeply in relief; this new electoral setup would be too much for the old-line political gangs, the bosses would be checkmated, good men would be elected in place of subservient ward-healers.

But something happened. The "good men" figured that the city's political life had been reformed forever and a day, and began thinking about other things. The politicians, who work at politics day in and day out, knuckled down and mastered the intricacies of proportional representation. And the first thing anybody knew the same old gang was back in the saddle, the great reform had misfired—and, eventually, the citizens in disgust threw out the new charter and went back to the old way of doing things.

X X X

THE point is that political reforms usually fail because the reformers, and the people who support them, are so short-winded. Everyone assumes that the battle has been won permanently. The bosses rally their forces, try a new method of attack—and presently are in the driver's seat again.

That happened in Cleveland; it will happen in New York, unless the people who are interested in decent government stay just as wide awake and determined as the politicians.

There is only one cure for misgovernment in America: unflagging, day in and day out vigilance on the part of all the people. Our tendency to put on one big push and then relax is the greatest safeguard the machine politician could ask for.

IT IS getting so that no prominent American who makes speeches can claim to have attained any distinction at all unless something that he says has made Herr Hitler's Nazis raise an angry protest.

This distinction was most recently attained by Dr. Robert A. Millikan, the Nobel prize-winning physicist of California Tech. In a speech at Copenhagen he was quoted as saying that "The world has not known for 300 years a reaction similar to that prevailing today, attempting to lead mankind back to an authoritative irrationality and unscientific superstition."

As you might expect, this drew fire from Germany. The Nazi newspaper, "Voelkischer Beobachter," deplored the "factlessness" of the remark, and predicted that Danish public opinion "will value tact and courtesy enough to disapprove such gross misuse of hospitality."

Mild enough, as Nazi protests go. But it does give Dr. Millikan the accolade without which no public speaker nowadays can feel that he has said something worth saying.

Aids in Controlling Blood Pressure and Prolonging Life of One Affected

(No. 244)

To control high blood pressure and permit the sufferer to live as long as possible, certain measures are desirable:

First, the various possible causes of the condition must be investigated and removed or controlled if possible. If there are infections in the tonsils, the teeth, the gallbladder or the genito-urinary tract, these must be brought under control.

Second, the burden on the tissues concerned, such as the blood vessels, the heart or the kidneys, must be removed or lightened as much as possible.

Third, because of the importance of rest in controlling this condition, it is well to have an analysis of the habits of the person affected as related to work, sleep, exercise, diet, worry, and similar facts. The observance of a good hygiene of living will do a great deal to help.

Fourth, if a person with high blood pressure is surrounded by other people who regularly affect his blood pressure badly, it may be necessary for him to be removed for a rest cure to a sanatorium or resort or to some place where the disturbing and blood pressure stimulating factor is not present.

If the problem is one of financial worry, the difficulty is, of course, a special problem. One doctor has advised that patients with high blood pressure spend a week end every month at home in bed.

The diet for the persons with high blood pressure should be a well-balanced diet with proteins providing about 10 per cent of the calories.

If the patient is overweight, he must plan to reduce his weight slowly over a long period of time. He must drink a sufficient amount of water to carry away body wastes.

The majority of people who have used tobacco over a long period of time do not have to give up tobacco on the discovery of the fact that they have high blood pressure unless smoking has been shown to be related definitely to the increased blood pressure.

Do not laugh at the wisdom of babes, or the funny words they use. When one of them says, "It's a perfectly dangerous day," meaning gorgeous, merely lost impressed, and agree that it is certainly fine weather.

Soon enough, they will learn the right words in the right place, but to smile, repeat or criticize will make them shy and afraid. We have a small visitor of three. She delights me beyond words. Today in the bathroom, she had splashed water everywhere with two blue glasses and a well-filled bowl. "I'm wetting the bunnies," she said sternly, fixing me with great blue eyes. "They pop right up and bite the kids." I never heard her say "kids" before. Words Splendidly Fresh

In a minute she had followed me to my room to watch me dress. "What's that?" she demanded, pointing to a mark on my arm.

"I think it's a mosquito bite," I suggested.

"Well," she said, "you have to hook them off or they'll buzz you." And she made a swooping motion with her little fat hand.

"Hook 'em off." Superb. I thought her word exactly right. And the "buzz" was rather good, too.

Almost in the same breath, and apropos of nothing, she planted herself before me, hands behind back, sternly, fixing me with great blue eyes. "They pop right up and bite the kids." I never heard her say "kids" before.

Words Splendidly Fresh

In a minute she had followed me to my room to watch me dress. "What's that?" she demanded, pointing to a mark on my arm.

"I think it's a mosquito bite," I suggested.

CAST OF CHARACTERS
CORAL CRANDALL, heroine and senior at Elton College.
DAVID ARMSTRONG, Elton chemistry professor and Coral's husband.
DONNA ALLEN, Coral's sorority roommate.
HOLT MARQUIS, Coral's one-time fiance.

Yesterday, David was scarcely reunited with Coral when he enlisted her to report that the secret formula of his chemical discovery has been stolen.

CHAPTER X
"DAVID, I simply can't understand it," Coral said, as they sat drinking their after-dinner coffee at the Tea Kettle. "That process has been missing two weeks, and not a single sign of it has appeared. It disappeared from the concealed drawer in your desk and vanished into thin air. You'd think that if the thief had sold it, we would have seen an announcement by some company of their 'discovery.' They'd want to make the announcement before President Norton makes the loss public."

David lit a cigaret and puffed on it moodily. "I've stopped even hazarding guesses as to what happened to it, Coral. All I can think of is that it was my fault it was stolen, and that Bendorff, Dean Mathews and most of the other faculty members think I stole it. It was inexcusable for me to leave that drawer containing the only copy of the process unlocked. I know that. But how was I to know that someone would sneak into the lab while I was gone, find the drawer that I thought no one but Maxwell, Bendorff and I knew about, and make off with the process as completely as if black magic were responsible?"

He drew deeply on his cigaret. "Sometimes I think it must have been black magic! I tell you, Coral, it was impossible for anyone to get into that lab Thursday afternoon, and the process was obviously stolen then. My two superiors were out of town at a meeting, I was in my rooms, and since there were no classes the laboratory was locked. Even the janitor took the afternoon off. Even though I did leave the drawer open the room itself was tight shut."

Coral reached across the table and took his free hand. "Don't worry about it too much, darling. I'm sure everything will come out all right eventually." Her brow clouded with worry. "I do wish the thing could be straightened out right away, though."

He shrugged. "I give up. Half the time I'm convinced that I have an evil genius wandering around the campus, concentrating all his energies on harming me and my wife."

AS she listened to his words, Coral had grown more and more excited. When he finished she spoke slowly, yet with excitement brimming in her voice.

"David, think carefully. Were you in the lab every minute of Friday afternoon? Didn't you leave once . . . just for a few minutes?"

His brow furrowed in concentration. Then he looked up suddenly. "Yes, I did leave once. About 3 o'clock I went outside to smoke a cigaret. I must have been gone about 15 minutes." His face fell. "That won't work, though, Coral. When I came back I found Donna and Hoyt Marquis there, fussing around the equipment. I asked Donna the other day if they'd seen anyone go in or out of the room while I was out and she said they hadn't, that they'd been there alone until I came back."

Coral jumped to her feet. "David, take me back to the house. Donna either took that process or had something to do with it. Don't you see how it all fits? She works in the lab and would have a chance to find that drawer. Her father is a chemical manufacturer. She's been trying to do something to please him, to make him keep her in school. What could be better than your process . . . and letting him think she worked it out herself? Hoyt may have helped her, to get even with me. I don't know how much of this is right, but I'm going to find out. Come on!"

Twenty minutes later, Coral burst into the room at the sorority house which she and Donna shared. Her roommate sat curled up on the window seat, eating chocolates and reading a movie magazine. She looked up, her face startled, as Coral spoke. "Donna, put down that magazine and listen to me."

Donna complied in surprise. "What's the matter with you? 'Plenty!' Coral's voice was stern. "Donna, tell me the truth. If you do, I promise that David and I will see that the authorities aren't hard on you. Donna, did you take that process from David's desk in the lab?"

Donna gazed at her unblinking, her eyes wide and innocent. "Coral, have you lost your mind? Has the process been stolen? How awful! Of course you're upset. But what makes you think

I would do such a dreadful thing?"

"You know the process was stolen. You spread the story around the campus," Coral said quietly. "You knew the process was stolen, because you took it. Didn't you? Answer me! Didn't you take it?"

Donna was angry now, her eyes were frightened, her usually rosy mouth was twisted in an ugly grimace. "I didn't take the silly process. You're crazy!"

Coral took her by the shoulders and shook her a little. "If you didn't take it you know who did. I'm sure of it!" As she released her, Coral's shoulder struck against a hanging bookcase. It swung crazily on its cord, then crashed, books and all, to the floor. As she stooped to pick them up, Coral noticed a slip of blue paper protruding from the bent leaves of a dictionary. She caught it up with a cry of triumph. She looked at Donna squarely. "You did a very poor job of hiding it. Now, let's have the whole story. I'm going to Professor Maxwell and you're coming with me."

Donna sprang to her feet, her eyes blazing. "Oh, no, you don't! In the first place I didn't take it. Hoyt did. I saw him, so he gave it to me to keep for reasons both of us have good reasons. You can't do a thing to me, because I still have the whip hand. Coral, if you try to report me for this, I'll get there first. I'll tell Maxwell that you took it, that I found it in your dictionary. I'll tell him David helped you and that you tried to sell it to my dad. I'll tell him you and David are married. In fact, Miss Coral Crandall, I'll tell everyone everything and more, too, and I'll make 'em believe me. I'll be the campus heroine and will I chuckle to see you and your precious David thrown out of here." She laughed loudly.

Coral looked at her gravely for a long minute. She turned and walked to the door. As she opened it, she wheeled and faced Donna again. "You've had your chance. I'm going to Maxwell and Bendorff with this story and the process. Do what you like. I know what I must do, and I'm sure my story will be believed."

Donna spoke contemptuously. "I'm afraid you're wrong. I'm going to Bendorff and Maxwell, too. We'll see who tells the most convincing story. You and your noble David, or little Donna. Your tale won't stand a chance against mine. Wait and see!"

And said earnestly: "You're a nice one. You're nice, yes." And then she turned ed without taking a breath and said, "Where'd you get that?" meaning an electric fan on a table.

Her mind jumps from this to that faster than one can easily follow, but she knows just what she is saying. And not for worlds would I discourage that happy prattle, and the adventure into words. She is one of three grandchildren who are my dearest and loveliest friends.

Creation.

One, at the moment, is drawing on the floor beside me. He is five. I am watching him from the corner of my eye. His flair for form is amazing. He is not copying, but drawing and coloring a tree. Now the red goes on dots. Oh, a Christmas tree. And if you could see it, it might astonish you. As symmetrical as a clock. This morning he drew a steam shovel to the life. His big interest is to make or draw things. We'll remember that, as early traits are important and can so easily be lost sight of through the years.

Then, there is the baby, who trots around imitating the others. Yet she has her own ideas, too. I made them all crowns yesterday, but although the others wore theirs proudly, she lifted hers off her curls, and put it on "Mister," the black dog.

Finds Many Virtues in 'Pulp' Reading

Some 10,000,000 Americans are reading the "pulp" regularly these days. They constitute an advertising market as fertile as that of the radio audience, and one of these days the great advertisers will wake up and begin to exploit it.

So says Harold B. Hersey, veteran "pulp" editor, in a frank and engaging book called "Pulpwood Editor" (Stokes, $3).

Man and boy, Mr. Hersey has been editing pulp magazines for something like a quarter of a century. In that time he has sent to the newsstands innumerable magazines—compilations of cowboy stories, of gangster stories, of love stories, of aviation stories, of every kind of story that you can easily imagine; and his revelation of the secrets of the trade is deeply interesting.

It used to be thought that the "pulp" drew their readers from the lower income brackets. Not so, says Mr. Hersey. The audience is neither unintelligent nor poverty-stricken; its one characteristic is the possession of the kind of imagination that needs direct, positive stimulation.

Furthermore, he says, the "pulp" are filled with pretty high-grade fiction. Altogether, Mr. Hersey believes that it is better written and more entertaining than that of the slick-paper magazines. It is written strictly according to formula, of course; so is nine-tenths of the more pretentious fiction. Within its limits, it is remarkably well done.

Whether you read the "pulp" or not, you'll find Mr. Hersey's book an absorbing account of an unusual subdivision of American literature.

HOLLYWOOD.—Most fans with good memories will recall Neal Burns. He has played quite a few comedy roles since celluloid became articulate, although in the last few years his parts have been fewer and smaller.

All fans past the age of 30 will remember Burns as a topnotch star of Christie comedies. Betty Compson was his leading lady. Some of his directors were Al Santell, Archie Mayo, Norman McLeod and William Baudine.

Burns received $1000 a week at the peak of his career, and he stayed in the important money nearly 15 years. Just now he's working in the rain. Director James Hogan is filming some tropical storm sequences on the "Ebb Tide" set at Paramount, and while his crew arranges the lights and camera angles, Neal Burns stands uncomplaining in the drizzle. He's a stand-in for Barry Fitzgerald. His wage is $3 a week.

Today's Pattern

YOU girls who need something simple and tailored for wear in the office through the hot months will make this dress (8999) for your own—and every woman needing something to wear shopping and traveling will approve the trim lines of its tailored design. The straight-front, button closing is button trimmed and a slightly fitted look is given to the silhouette by the Princess line of the design. The pockets are placed very high as is new this season, and the yoke is deep enough to give a squared look to the shoulder. If you like the new slide fasteners, a long one in contrasting color is smartly used in this dress. Make it up in a fabric that lends itself to smooth tailoring—cotton broadcloth, shantung, linen or pique would look awfully smart.

Designed in sizes 14, 16, 18, 20, 42 and 44. Size 16 requires 4 1/2 yards of 35 or 39 inch material. 1 1/2 yards zipper is required for closing, or buttons not too widely spaced.

For a complete selection of late dress designs, send for the summer pattern book. It's 15 cents if purchased separately, or, if you want to order it with the pattern above, send in only 10 cents.

To secure your pattern with step-by-step sewing instructions, send 15 cents in coin with your name, address, style number and size to Today's Patterns, 11 Sterling Place, Brooklyn, N. Y., and be sure to MENTION THE NAME OF THIS NEWSPAPER.

The trial habit, which is almost a comedy tradition, now started away back in "The Mouthpiece," with William Powell. Then came "Two Seconds," "Journal of a Crime," "Frisco Jenny," "Lawyer Man" and on down through the current cycle—"Midnight Court," "Black Legion," "Marked Woman," "The Great O'Malley," "Mountain Justice" and "In the Deep South."

At least two of the above, "Black Legion" and "Marked Woman," were partly into production before final disposition was made of the real cases in which they were based. So I hear now that there is a great wracking of creative brains over a super-epic—in fact, a Supreme—courtroom picture. The Supreme Court would be a good place to end the cycle.

Think of the Future

There's a sing band—and I didn't say "swing"—in "Double or Nothing." All voices, no instruments. Director Theodore Reed got the idea of hiring a lot of people who really can imitate violins, saxophones, trumpets, bass fiddles and such, and coaching them into a regular orchestra to serve as background for Bing Crosby's crooning.

I'm not sure what it proves, but the result is interesting and okay for the very liberal interpretations of modern music. There is one disconcerting thought in it, though: Tomorrow's musicians may all be instrument imitators.

What are we to do about the neighborhood kid who goes around making noises like a slide trombone?

The following little drama of human kindness is one I should like to pass on to O. McIntyre whose eyes are always open to bits of love and human interest.

"One day this week, over on Hope's trading and sporting center, South Walnut street, an auctioneer with an unusually persuasive voice was playing his trade that of selling articles to the highest bidder, this particular time, the article happened to be—mules. Mingling in the crowd was the familiar face and figure of Mr. J. W. Phillips, whose face and figure are much more familiar to us than we are to him, since total blindness has been his unhappy lot for the past several years. Mr. Phillips was as usual quite busy announcing to the crowd that he also had wares for sale, not recognizing, not even for a minute, the difference in importance between a Missouri mule and an Arkansas peanut, especially if it were fresh and nicely pitched, and he certainly "told it to those present."

The duo continued and when the auctioneer passed on his last mule to a satisfied customer, he gave an exhibition of a most generous spirit, not always extended toward a competitor, and asked for the remaining stock of peanuts, and from his better point of vantage, even in a more persuasive, enthusiastic voice sold the last sack of peanuts, before some of customers realized that they had come to buy a mule and remained to buy a sack of peanuts, and had also had part in a very unusual display of human kindness and interest in a very busy world.

The writer of this column is having a very busy time today, wishing herself, many happy returns of the day, not a very opportune time to enter the world I'll admit, since Emancipation day certainly has its draw backs, and the ordinary human being rejoices not only in his or her freedom, but in that of others, but it makes a housekeeper wish that the celebration of this freedom came on another day than that of her birthday, and having the eventful day fall on Saturday only piles up the chores.

The next meeting of the club will be held on the third Friday in September.

Mrs. Delland queried. "It looks like a bill."

"Yes, dear—a balance of $22.50."

"But George never bought things that way! His tailor always sent the bill at the end of the month!"

"Well, Mary, don't bother about that now. Let's look at some of the others."

Mrs. Delland's surprise increased as package after package was opened.

There was an electric clock at $19.95, a dictionary at $17.50, a set of three pipes in a case at $18.25.

"I can't understand it," said Mrs. Delland. "George never smoked a pipe in his life! I can't see why he should order these!"

"Perhaps for some friend," suggested Ann.

"Ann! I don't believe any of these things were ordered! There must be something wrong! In the morning we will just send them all right back!"

Mary Delland did not know, and at last, when all bills had been paid, and that none of the packages bore return addresses!

The objectives of this church have been high for attendance and spiritual power. The highest goals for Sunday school attendance in the history of the church were reached during the month of April. The month of May was designated for enlisting the Sunday school pupils in essential items of Christian interest, emphasizing the six-point record system. The month of June has been designated in our calendar of activities as "Evangelistic Effort Month." While every month should be used to revitalize the church, the church is concentrating upon it in June. Without a visiting evangelist, protracted meetings, or any unusual methods at this particular time, we are seeking to present the claims of Christ for a normal Christian experience of surrender to Christ as the Lord of life. An invitation is extended to all the members and friends of the church to attend the services and participate prayerfully in this most worthy effort in the work of the Kingdom of God.

The services Sunday will be as follows:

9:45 a. m. Sunday school.

10:55 a. m. Morning worship: "God, Man, Salvation."

7:00 p. m. Baptist Training Union.

8:00 p. m. Evening evangelistic service: "A study in Values."

Everyone is cordially invited to attend.

Mulching Valued as a Soil-Saver

Used by George Washington at Mt. Vernon Over Century Ago

The Soil Conservation Service thinks some farmers may be overlooking a real opportunity in not using mulch to help control soil erosion. Mulching is one of the oldest, cheapest and easiest farm practices known for erosion control. More than a century ago, George Washington used mulch—called in rubbish—to prevent soil washing on his Mt. Vernon lands.

There are a lot of materials that can be used as a mulch: fallen leaves, brush, branches and other forest litter, and probably the best of all, barnyard manure. There are many ways to put this material to valuable use. Here are just a few. Many farms have raw gullies and galled spots in the pasture. Farmers co-operating with the Soil Conservation Service have found that these areas can be made to produce abundant grass by "sweetening" with manure. Many farms waste large quantities of manure each year. This material will produce good returns in increased pasture for livestock as well as push vegetation along rapidly to check erosion losses on these galled areas.

Autrey Wilson, co-operator with the Hope Soil Conservation Project, found that manure placed under strips of Bermuda sod pushed the growth of grass until the bottom and sides of a 15-foot gully were completely covered the first season. Mr. Wilson further stated that the best grazing in his 30-acre pasture was down in this large gully. Other farmers in the Project Area have noticed similar results from mulching or sweetening gullies and galled areas with manure, straw, and other waste materials around the barn lot.

If there is an old straw stack around the place that won't be utilized, you have the best mulching material there is. Mulch prevents seed from being washed away, holds moisture for germination and vegetative growth, and greatly reduces extremes between heat and cold. By using mulch, you come just about as close as possible to duplicating nature's own way of protecting young vegetation.

Mulch eventually rots and becomes part of the soil, adding valuable plant food and humus. Combining mulching and fertilizer, you are making a start toward restoring fertility to these badly eroded areas.

This is a practice that is easy for any farmer to duplicate. Farmers who have tried it have found that mulching is a profitable practice in addition to aiding soil erosion control.

Saenger - Rialto

The high-velocity romance of two famous people lends a melodious theme to "Shall We Dance," Fred Astaire-Ginger Rogers musical shown here some few weeks ago for a preview and now running Sunday, Monday and Tuesday at the Saenger.

Unlike their earlier offerings in which the two dancing acts were seen as struggling aspirants for fame, the new picture starts out with both portraying stars at the top of their respective fields, Astaire as a world-renowned ballet dancer, Miss Rogers as an equally well-known revue artiste.

Spectacular dance numbers, with Harriet Hector, America's leading ballerina, adding her torch-singer talents to the work of the two stars, while Edward Everett Horton and Eric Blore lend the comedy.
